The Fantastic World of Phonecards March/April 1996

EVER since the Government deregulated the telecommunications industry we've seen a lot of changes. A second national carrier was introduced and Service Providers specialising in mobiles, long distance, value added service and so-on showed up on the scene. Now dealing with phone companies becomes more complicated with phone companies introducing very confusing tariff plans not to mention trying to decipher your phone bills. Prices came tumbling down, but how were we to know for sure that we were using the right pricing plan and paying the least possible price for the service we needed. The Service Providers and dealers were vigorously competing for our business, but were they giving us the best prices and services available?

Who is One.Tel?

To give you some background into the communications industry we must look at the way it operates. There are three types of companies that provide you with telecommunications services "Carriers", "Services Providers" and "Aggregators."

Here in Australia there are three "Carriers" who own the network and all the copper wires in the ground it runs on. None of them offer an easy combined billing service.

Services Providers buy call services from these Carriers and sell them on at a discount rate to consumers and business, usually issuing their own bill.

Aggregators also negotiate services in bulk from the Carriers and pass discounts onto their customers, but usually don't bill them direct. Instead they get a commission from the carrier and pass discounts onto their customers. Instead they get a commission and then usually send the end user a cheque as their call discount.

This all sounds very complicated and believe me, it is. However for most of us, our residential and business phone lines are still maintained by the original carrier in Australia. But over the last few years we have had the advantage of having an extra carrier to take up our long distance calls or mobile calls, however you still get separate accounts

Now new company called One.Tel have taken up the gauntlet to resolve this problem.

But who is One.Tel?

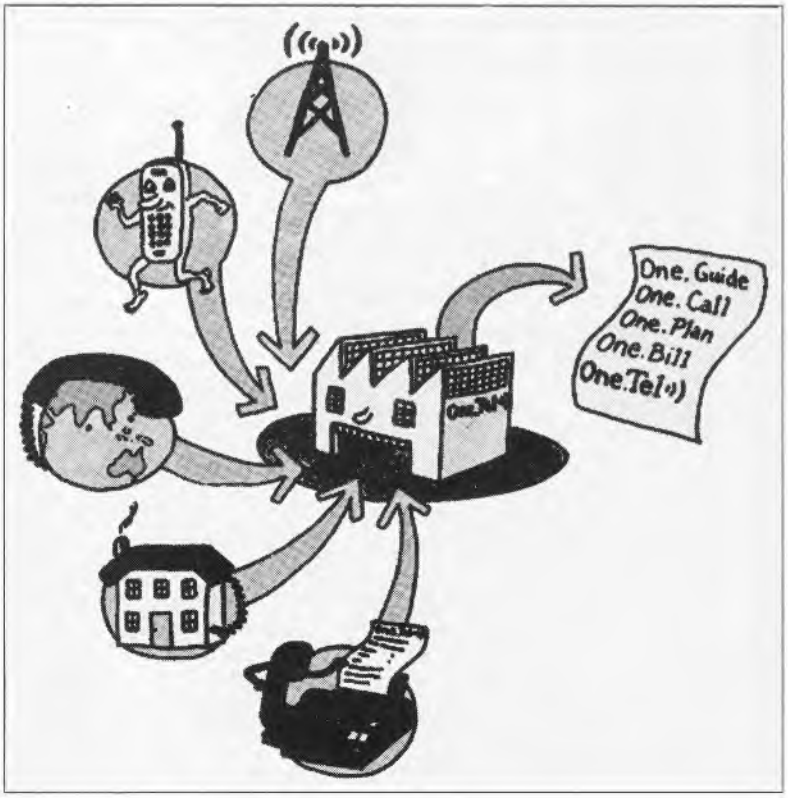
ONE.TEL is a group of industry professionals who have joined together and decided it was about time someone simplified the way we all do business with telephone companies. One.Tel was formed with the backing of Optus and FAI Insurance.

While they don't want to be known as common carriers they are quick to point out that they don't wish to be thought of as a Service Provider or Aggregators. They are more inclined to think of their company as a modern "phone company" that will provide the ease-of-use, helpful, flexible service and personal attention.

One.Tel's aim is to provide a system whereby you only have one bill to pay each month whether it be your home or office or both. This bill can incorporate not only you local calls but long distance calls as well as, mobiles and faxlines.

To encourage you to become one of their customers One.Tel has even made it simpler for you whereby you only have to fill out one simple application form for the service.

Now, as never before, you the consumer has multiple choices as to how you want to communicate and with which company you want to do business with.



MTV's Beavis and Butthead now on DIT's phonecards

DIAL INTERNATIONAL TELECOM LTD (D.I.T) are a private telecommunications company that specialises in providing low cost international telephone calls and operates from their headquarters in Brentford, Middlesex England.

They provide their service to customers all over Europe and beyond, and it is from this that their International Phonecards have developed. D.I.T. Phonecards can be used in the U.K., Spain, France, Germany, Ireland, Switzerland, Austria, Canada and the U.S.A. The cards are simple to use you only have to dial the local access number which you will find on the back of each card, then a voice will ask you for your account number, and then your pin number (both of which are on the back of the cards), and finally the number you wish to dial. The cards however can be only used with TONE PHONES, and are intended for international calls only.

Their first card was produced in June 1994, these cards were the Mastercall Set. D.I.T. have a very strict policy that once a card has been printed, they will not do any reruns and their average print run is 1,000 of each phonecard design. They have of course, earlier printed a few designs (Coke) in higher quantities, but the cards were sold out within a short time.

Beavis and Butthead is the latest in their range of cards which have included WW II Aircraft, Civil Aircraft, Military Aircraft, Wildlife, Glamour, Recreation, Irish Related, Sport Cars, Taxi's etc.

Memories of Bart's

THE Royal Hospital of St Bartholomew, or Bart's as it popularly known, was founded by Rahere, an Augustian canon, in the year 1123 during th reign of Henry 1.

Since that date, the hospital has continued to treat the sick and injured on its present site at West Smithfield in the City of London. For the first four centuries of its existence, Bart's was a religious institution and its took staff monastic vows.

The nursing term "sister" dates from this time. During the dissolution of the monasteries, the hospital came near to closure. However, following pressure from the citizens of London, Henry VIII, nearing death, refounded the hospital by granting it to the City and giving it a new secular administration and staff to care for the sick and poor.

By the eighteenth century the hospital had become overcrowded and dilapidated, unable to cope with the number of patients needing treatment.

Between 1729 and 1768, all the old structures were demolished and replaced by a new hospital designed by the eminent architect James Gibbs; most of these fine Georgian buildings still survive.

Many men and women of distinction have served at Bart's, including William Harvey, discoverer of the circulation of the blood, and Ethel Fenwick who campaigned for the state registration of nurses. Bart's became part of the National Health Service in 1948 and in 1994 merged with the Royal London and London Chest Hospital to form Royal Hospitals NHS Trust.

To commemorate the Bart's history a limited 500 edition cards have been produced by Mrs G P Speight who collects phonecards for Charities — Chiefly Psoriasis (a disease of the skin) Research . All proceeds of the sale of the card went to the League of St Bartholomew's Nurses and The Bart's Guild.

Illustration of the card, depicting Junior Doctors and Medical students assembled by the Fountain awaiting the staff of the Ward Rounds 1906 was done by Karl S Kozak.

Competition results and winners

THE question in last months competition was "What is a Koala Count?"

The answer was:

A Koala Count is a way to help collectors identify specific reprints. If a koala symbol is printed in the selvedage adjacent to stamps down either side of a sheet, this indicates a reprint. Two koalas indicate a second reprint, and so on. A kangaroo indicates the fifth reprint.

Congratulations to the following winners.

Sydney View

with Opera House

AS 1996 kicks into gear the old world of phonecards is certainly looking promising for both collector and dealer.

From a collectors point of view "custom cards" have certainly started to calm down somewhat. If you cast your mind back twelve months there were any number of phonecard issues coming out. However, for the month of January we did have one card out — the "Phantom". On the horizon, we'll obviously there will be Coke V in March/April but what else?

This is giving the collector time to catch breath and take a look at what else there is around rather than just keeping their collection up-to-date.

In the way of what else is around, one certainly should take a look at the various folders that Telstra released towards the end of last year. In total there were five folders released for exhibitions that they (Telstra) attended.

As a quick re-cap they were Singapore '95 (with white Cocky), Cardex '95 (with Black Cocky), Indopex '95 and then for the Hong Kong fair they attended in mid December '95 they released two folders.

These were the Year of The Rat folder and the Hong Kong and Sydney Skyline cards ($2 and $5). Depending on how complete you want to be, you don't necessarily have to buy the two Cocky folders of Singapore and Cardex because you can buy the loose cards at face value from Telstra.

Also the Year of The Rat folder is in the same category. However, the two folders from Hong Kong and Indonesia are a new innovation from Telstra, in as much as that you can only buy them from fairs they are attending as the cards are not available from the collector service.

However, in both cases they have made a slight concession in that similar cards have been released locally — similar, but not the same.

So this means that for a collector to keep their collection complete you will need to buy both the Indopex and the Hong Kong folders because it's the only way you will be able to obtain the cards.

At present, these folders are selling for $35 (Hong Kong) and $55 (IndoPex) The price difference here does reflect the difficulty in trying to purchase them at present.

However, down the track, they will both probably be around the same price, although in the case of the Indopex folder, this was sprung on collectors without anyone being prepared. Approximately only 1,000 made it back from the 2,000 that travelled to Indonesia.

In the case of the Hong Kong folder, several local dealers who attended the fair brought stock back. Yet it is important to remember that there was only 2,000 printed of this as well. So, as I mentioned above, down the track it may end up around the same price as the Indo folder.

Nevertheless, these folders are certainly worth considering along with the Singapore and the Cardex folders. Okay you can buy these two cards alone loose, but think of this, there were only 1,820 Singapore folders sold and in the case of Cardex only 1,223 folders. Pretty low numbers in circulation, of those two

The Cardex is my favourite and not just because of the very low numbers sold. For a start very few of those 1,200 odd were sold to dealers. Secondly, it is an extremely attractive issue which should also help matters.

So cop the tip and go and pick one up, currently retailing for $45 before the price starts to rise here.

Talking about items that are difficulty to get, how about some of the more recent cards in used condition. Many collectors would be shocked to see just how small the stocks of some dealers are on many of the recent issues.

To name a few — Local Legends, the $10 from the Pitt Street, Payphone Centre set, $20 Lifeline, $20 Homecoming, Qantas set, Beijing Opera set and so on. Not to mention the two $5 Cocky cards mentioned before. Of course, in some cases the numbers issued of these cards is quite low for general issue (30,000 to 50,000), in the case of the Opera and Cockys.

However, by rights, the Qantas set should not then be hard to find as 100,000 sets were released. Yet they are proving difficult to get. In fact, it is one of those crazy situations were mint price and used price end up quite close.

However once these go off sale the price should rise, if supply is anything to go by.

Caribbean charm

ANTIGUA'S little sister, Barbuda, is 65 square miles of unspoilt Caribbean charm and unexpected surprises. The island has been richly blessed with many priceless treasures — not only those to be found on the hundreds of shipwrecks around the island.

Other gems include the crystal clear water, its abundant natural wildlife and pristine pink and white sand beaches — considered to be the finest anywhere in the world.

Almost everyone lives in the town of Codrington which takes its name from the Codrington family which has been linked to island since 1680.

The family began to cultivate sugarcane on Antigua and had imported slaves to Barbuda to raise stock and grow provisions for those working in the mills.

With the abolition of slavery and the family's fortune fluctuating with worldwide sugarcane prices, there was no money to pay the newly freed slaves and operations ceased. England sought to sell or give away Barbuda but without success.

In 1860, Antigua was given responsibly for Barbuda, and 10 years later the Codrington family ended its lease and almost two centuries of control.

Unlike the trapping of modern living which are to be found on other islands, Barbuda can proudly boast that there are fewer than 100 cars, no paved roads and only one petrol station.

In spite of this, or perhaps of their heritage and the island's natural beauty it's home to 5,000 frigate birds and other wildlife which includes a sizable population of wild deer, goats, sheep, cattle and horses.

However, they do have, and not surprisingly so, a modern telephone system and have produced several colourful telephone cards which show the Frigate Bird, the pink sand beaches, Martello Tower and fort, built around 1666, (the tower being added around 1705) and Children at play.

The people of Barbuda, love their island and believe that there is no place like it on earth like it. They may be right.

The Market

Market Report 15

Due to the large number of phonecards that are being produced each month we have been unable to allocate sufficient space to accommodate them all. Therefore we have been forced to redesign the Market Report section and from this issue we will only dispaly one card from each of the earlier series, with full prices shown on all cards of that series. All the latest cards will be displayed .

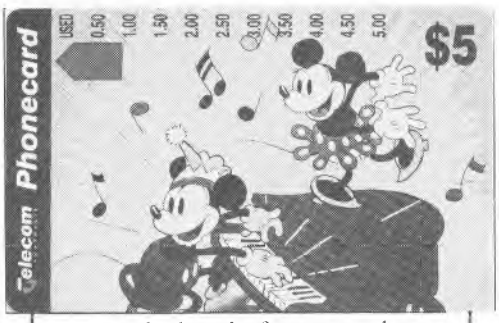
Fundamentals ... for beginners

by Danny Jurd

TO begin with ... Last month we started a series of articles relating to Thematic collecting. Coca Cola was the flavour of the month, this month it is Disney.

On a world scale, Thematic Phonecard collecting has two leading lights, Coca Cola and Disney. It is difficult to say if one is more popular than the other, however Disney certainly has a lot going for it in the way that it appeals to people of all ages right across the world. There is little doubt that those famous Mickey Mouse ears are one of the most recognisable symbols for millions and millions of people.



As such, over the years the hobby of collecting Disney memorabilia has become something of an industry in itself, and as a result, as the Disney characters started appearing on phonecards it was logical that collectors of phonecards and indeed Disney memorabilia would be attracted to them.

For someone looking to move into Disney Phonecards, as with Coca Cola, it's always good to start in your own back yard. In the case of Australian collectors there has been, as many of you are no doubt aware, two Disney issues in Australia. The two issues, illustrated here can be bought for not much more than $50 for the pair. If a collector shops around they may even find them much cheaper than that, from time to time. Anyway, once you have obtained these issues you can look at some of those other issues from around the world.

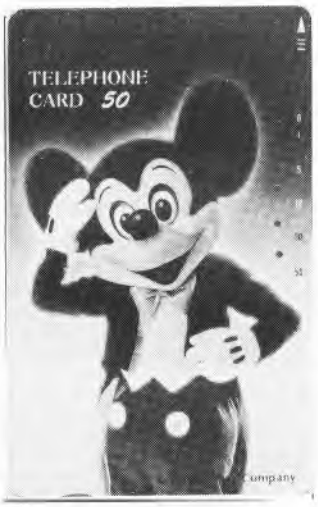
As with Coca Cola Phonecards, the most prolific issuer of Disney Phonecards is Japan. There really is a multitude of issues that cover a large range of different characters and movies. Recently a new Disney store opened in Tokyo and they have issued a very attractive series of cards. These mint Japanese Disney cards usually sell for around $30. Once again, occasionally a bit less, and for scarcer cards, of course, a lot more.



However, if one does not want to go to the expense of buying mint Japanese Disney cards, you can buy used Disney cards. Many dealers will have a selection of these in stock, so you can build up a range in your collection without having to spend a great deal of money.

Without a doubt though, some of the nicer Disney cards around come form New Zealand. I know, when Status Retail buys some new NZ Disney cards, they always go well. As you can see from the illustrations it is not hard to see why either. These New Zealand Disney cards are also released in special packs. These packs are always very nicely done and some of the earlier ones have become quite valuable. It is fair to say however, that they tend to be a little more expensive. Then, as with many things, you get what you pay for.

Singapore is another area that has released some Disney cards. By my reckoning they have now released two sets, both featuring the Disney Characters from Snow White through to Pinocchio. These series are done in small folders and sell for around $60 for series one and around $80 for series two. Once again these prices many vary slightly.

There has of course been Disney cards from Europe as well. Germany released the Lion King card last year and this was a very popular card. Other countries that have released Disney cards include Great Britain, Finland Denmark and so on. Funnily enough in the USA there has been a series of old Disney posters on Phonecards, which were apparently issued without approval. But as far as approved product goes, not much yet.

I was speaking to a US dealer recently, who said that there were some Disney approved cards coming out. However, all they had on them was the Disney ears The characters on the cards were not of any particular character. This of course will lead to characters on the cards in the future. For a Disney collector these will be something to look out for because the biggest collectors are in the US and they will collect their own cards first. As such these will be good to have.

Snoopy is due to touch down soon !

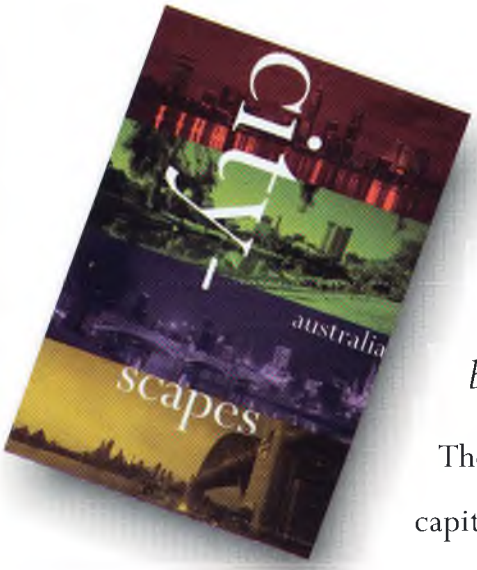
With Telstra



With the release of Australia's first City Scape Phonecard™ series, Telstra celebrates the excitement, glamour and beauty of Australia's cities.

The City Scape series features just four of Australia's capital cities - Adelaide's glorious Festival Centre nestled snugly on the Torrens River, the spectacular lights of Perth overlooking the Swan River, the majesty of Melbourne by night spanning the Yarra River; and the unforgettable sight of Sydney harbour at dusk.

The City Scape Limited Edition is available in the February issue of the Bulletin. Watch out in the April issue for the new Under Water Life Phonecard™ series, featuring exotic Australian marine life.

To receive your free copy of the Australian Phonecard™ Bulletin, simply call (02) 204 0255.
